Optimizing Transitional Care Management (TCM) for Older Adults: Closing Gaps and Improving Outcomes

Camille Jordan, MSN, APRN, FNP-C, CDP
SVP, Chief Clinical Officer at Brookdale

Older adults often experience complex challenges when transitioning between care settings, making effective Transitional Care Management (TCM) critical to improving outcomes, reducing readmissions and supporting recovery. This session explores common barriers to successful care transitions and highlights evidence-based strategies that promote continuity of care. Participants will learn how interdisciplinary collaboration, caregiver engagement and senior living communities can work together to help strengthen care coordination, improve patient experiences and support safer, more successful transitions across the healthcare continuum.

Following the presentation, the participant will be able to:

- Describe the importance of effective TCM for older adults and its impact on patient safety, quality of care and healthcare utilization.
- Identify common clinical, social and communication-related challenges that place older adults at risk during transitions between healthcare settings.
- Recognize evidence-based TCM strategies that improve continuity of care, reduce preventable readmissions and support positive outcomes for older adults.
- Evaluate how senior living communities can partner with healthcare providers, patients and caregivers to help strengthen care transitions and address gaps in post-acute care coordination.
